H.M.S. NORFOLK

IT IS A FAR CRY FROM H.M.S. NORFOLK which arrived here this morning to H.M.S. Discovery and H.M.S. Chatham which, under Vancouver and Brunton, examined and charted the coast more than 140 years ago, or even to H.M.S. Satellite, a corvette of 1,462 tons and twenty-one guns which was stationed at Esquimalt from 1857 to 1860. Although the fine modern cruiser which anchored here to-day is stationed many miles away and can make only periodical visits to this coast, like every other British warship which comes here from time to time she stirs many old memories of the days when Esquimalt was one of the most interesting and picturesque places on the coast, when numerous bluejackets were always to be seen on this city's streets, and officers were prominently identified with the social and sporting life of the community.

Our visitor also stimulates, in many quarters, research among the records for particulars of the many famous British ships of war which in early times played a notable part in the progress, besides exercising a marked influence upon the character, of the young colony. These officers had to play many parts according to the exigencies of the new and novel situations which were continually arising. Many of our best-known place names are reminiscent either of these vessels or those who commanded them, some of whom, by the way, won high distinction elsewhere.

The visit of H.M.S. Norfolk is the chief occasion of Victoria's first Navy Week in modern times, and is cordially welcomed by the public who will hope that Vice-admiral Drax, his officers and company will thoroughly enjoy their stay in these waters.

MARIE DRESSLER

A SIGNIFICANT AS THE POPULARITY of Marie Dressler gained on stage and screen for the whole-heartedness of her comedy, was the example of unconquerable courage and hard work she set in the latter part of her life. This Canadian-born and Canadian-educated actress refused to become old and dependent and to discard her talents.

In the early years of this century, leading up to and through the time of her greatest stage triumph as the star of "Tillie's Nightmare," she had a great stage name. But after the war public taste changed; with the rise of sex and other modern stage themes, only beauty and youth, it seemed, could draw dollars to the box offices of the legitimate stage. Miss Dressler, whose services had been in demand at $2,500 a week salary, found herself "old and no longer wanted" and without funds, as she had been generous in the days of her large earnings.

However, she refused to accept this situation. She went to Hollywood to try to make a living. She thought there might be some small character parts she could pick up. What followed her advent in Hollywood was that an actress whom the entertainment world had looked upon as done, conquered the moving picture world and became one of the greatest moving picture stars of all time. From the minor roles in which she had counted upon earning $150 a week to see her through her old age, the tide of public favor carried her to the point where her annual income recently has been reported to be running at four times that of the President of the United States.

If ever a screen actress merited recognition it was Marie Dressler, past middle age. Her comedy was robust and not too subtle, but clean. It was her expansive personality and strong character which, "in spite of this plain old face of mine," drew the public to her on the films as it made for her friendships in all classes of society. As one who knew her remarked: "It was no 'plain old face,' but a beautiful old face, in which shone intelligence, the only true beauty."

CANADIAN BUSINESS

ACCORDING TO THE SURVEY OF Canadian business conditions conducted by the Bank of Nova Scotia for the quarter ending with June, the Dominion record on the whole was one of moderate sustained improvement. Industrial production after a slight reaction once more turned upward. Recent gains in general industrial employment and revenue carloadings were maintained, while the rate of turnover of bank deposits lately advanced substantially.

Local conditions, however, show considerable variation, says the bank's review. Assisted by substantial public expenditures, Ontario has been the leader during the past quarter. In the Province of Quebec, there has been a pause. In the Maritime provinces and British Columbia, there have been slight recessions. Conditions in the prairie provinces have been quiet, but there is a more cheerful outlook in the west.

Among the chief industries, construction has been the laggard. A good deal of pick-and-shovel labor has been available, and there are some signs of revival in building generally; even residential building has been more active. But we still await the sustained improvement of construction, which is an essential of our economic health.

In agriculture, recent rains have benefited the Canadian crops, while unfavorable crop forecasts from other countries, notably the United States, have stimulated the grain market. Prospects for the grower have thus definitely brightened. Livestock production, on the other hand, is still, in some areas, severely hampered by the shortage of fodder.

When we look beyond the borders of Canada, the picture is even more confused, the review observes. Unrest continues in many countries. Adjustment to the crisis has been retarded in the United States largely by labor troubles. In Spain and Austria, France and Germany, there is acute political tension. A heavy price is already being exacted for the failure of the nations to disunite. The general atmosphere of fear in Europe resembles far too closely that of the years from 1907 to 1914.

Despite political and industrial difficulties, in addition to the maintenance (and sometimes increase) of trade restrictions and to exchange instability, the volume of the world trade has grown visibly during the past year. Unfortunately, however, there is one continent, the bank review says, which has not participated in this recovery, the continent of Europe, whose external trade appears still to be shrinking. According to calculations made in this bank, if the twelve months ending in March, 1934, be compared with those ending in March, 1933, there was an average increase of eight and one-half per cent in the volume of exports of eight countries outside the continent of Europe, but in eleven countries on the continent of Europe, the volume of exports declined, on an average, by approximately three per cent.

Whether the rate of improvement noted by the bank for the quarter under the review from which we have quoted will be maintained throughout the year, or will suffer a temporary reaction, the reviewers do not predict. It is clear enough to many, however, that definite accelerated recovery must be dependent upon the solution of many fundamental problems requiring plain commonsense treatment. Canada's chief requirement is that of finding employment for its large present workless population and this should be solved by the development of the country and the creation of new sources of wealth. It can not be done by waiting for the rest of the world to find a magic wand which will dispell economic depressions. Canadian conditions, which are those of a new country, call for their own peculiar treatment, not the formulas with which old countries which have exhausted their natural resources, in whole or in large part, are endeavoring to solve their problems. We must exploit new territory, instead of running around in the old one like a squirrel in a cage.

ADVANCE AUSTRALIA!

RECURRING FEDERAL SURPLUSES, a complete restoration of credit at home and abroad, substantial reduction in unemployment, healthier internal situation, decreased taxation, partial restoration of pension and public service salary deductions—these are some of the features in the story of Australia's recent progress, as told by Prime Minister Lyons in his budget speech in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Lyons said that instead of the anticipated federal deficit of $5,880,000 at the end of the financial year, June 30, there was a surplus of $6,610,000. The revenue had exceeded the estimate by $26,810,000. Expenditure had been $14,420,000 more than expected, which was accounted for by the payment of $15,225,000 for the relief of wheat farmers.

Since his government took office, the Prime Minister said, unemployment percentages had declined from 30 per cent to 20.9 per cent, and unemployment due directly to the depression had been cut almost in half. Factory employment had increased by 20 per cent. The national income had increased by $295,000,000. Between 1931 and 1934 savings bank deposits increased by $55,000,000.

Exports of merchandise increased from $395,000,000 in 1931-32 to $485,000,000, or an improvement of $90,000,000. Imports had risen by $75,000,000, yet the commodity balance of trade was the highest for three years and was more than sufficient to cover overseas interest.

Loan conversions in London had reduced the average interest rate from 4.27.25 to 4.18.50, making annual savings in interest of $9,135,000 and exchange $2,280,000. The Commonwealth public debt had decreased by $29,000,000 since June, 1932.

Deficits of the states had decreased from $92,000,000 in 1931-32 to $29,400,000 (estimated) in 1934-35.

Taxation concessions provided last year to an annual value of $49,000,000 were being maintained, the Prime Minister added, and these would be supplemented by liberalization of old age and war pensions, adjustments in public service salaries, and further sales tax and postage duty relief.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

CO-OPERATION
The Picture Advocate

There has been a wonderful co-operative movement in the past few years in the whole diocese of Antigonish and great progress has been made in many directions. The credit for this lies with St. Francis Xavier University and with the Catholic clergy and it seems to me that the work in Antigonish is well ahead of the clergy in the other universities and the clergy of other denominations of the Maritimes. The improvements is not only in a material way but also in the education of the people along the lines of social progress. We commend to the authorities of Dalhousie, Acadia and Mount Allison Universities and to the parishes of the United, Presbyterian, Baptist and Anglican churches a careful study of the Antigonish movement.

TYPHOID CARRIERS
The New York Sun

The census of persons listed as typhoid carriers—those who carry and transmit the germs of the disease without themselves suffering from it—in New York State at the end of 1933 showed 940 in New York City, 207 in the state outside the city but not in state institutions, and fifteen in state institutions. The total, 962, was forty-two greater than that at the end of 1932 and 103 greater than that at the end of 1931. This does not mean that the number of carriers is increasing; it means that the authorities are steadily improving the system which identifies the carriers. The health departments, state and city are consistently strengthening the sanitary requirements.

Four of the persons newly listed by the State Health Department had to do with production of milk. One of them was detected in a routine examination of dairy farm workers. Twenty-one were housewives. One was a butler and cook; another was a minister. The minister's wife, who discovered after several examinations at a camp meeting were taken ill. He, like all other unidentified carriers, was unaware of his plight until the laboratory revealed it.

HARD-BOILED

ONE OF THE intriguing features of the present world situation is the attitude of the average man on the street here towards the actual killings, bombings, torturing and bleedings in Europe just now. I have listened for some time to talk about the trouble over there, I have heard young men rejoice at the prospect of going to war. I have heard older people say there would be a revolution in this country before it would send another soldier abroad. I have heard learned ladies expound the latest meaning of the unloved and little known proposition concerning its outcome. But not once have I ever heard anyone except any member of the Hitler crew over the history of the Europeans themselves.

It is amazing to see how philosophically we observe the agony of the Europeans. When 500 are butchered in Austria overnight, it doesn't worry us in the least. Yet if 500 were murdered in Canada it would cause a national sensation. We who hear that the German government has murdered a lot of people in cold blood, without a trial, our only question is how this is going to affect us. The number of the ruler of Austria who exciting as a political development, but no one here seemed to have any human feelings of sympathy about it.

The Europeans seem to be regarded as so many problems in politics and we can watch them working themselves out as you would watch a game of chess. At this distance, when you read of machine gunning and mass homicide, it is not easy to realize that these people are not much different from us, except in their lack of political training. They have wives and children and houses and dogs like us, affections like us and intimations of immortality. As individuals they are no better and no worse than we are, only more ignorant. But you would think that they were animals. Indeed, there would be much more fun if dogs or horses were murdered here as the Europeans are being murdered these days.

Apparently this continent is going to have to shoulder the load of democracy almost single-handed in a world which isn't ready for it yet. That will take us all our time without going into Europe. But the cold-blooded way we can observe the agonies of humanity at large from this little point of security is rather startling, makes you wonder whether they were animals. Indeed, there would be much more fun if dogs or horses were murdered here as the Europeans are being murdered these days.

INTELLIGENT WIVES

WHEN SOME learned duck in the United States promulgated the theory a few weeks ago that college women were usually utter failures as wives, he seems to have hit on the source of a great deal of secret misery. The papers have been full down there of letters from gentlemen who have married college women and who hasten to endorse the professor's opinion of them. The professor is becoming a sort of popular hero among dissatisfied husbands, and higher education is in a partial eclipse.

"He looks like a tame buffalo," remarked the American, who was passing through a glass panel into the office of the editor-in-chief of The Winnipeg Free Press. John Diefenbaker is in the chair he has occupied for thirty-three years. He is a tall, thin man, suggesting latent strength; his big head, bent over his proofs, was covered with a shock of chestnut hair. As he looked up to nod a welcome, his big, high-featured, honest face was unsmiling, but cordial. In a rasping, unmeaning voice he gave us the time of day.

On Shelves Of Local Library

"Your Health and How to Preserve It," by Dr. Morris Fleishman, is among this week's additions to the non-fiction shelves of the Victoria Public Library. It is a book written for the layman and tells how to safeguard health. The author gives a brief survey of the diseases from which people suffer and in his own sound and sensible way advises treatment and diet.

"John Henry Newman," by J. Michael Neary, is the life-story of the great theologian operating in the Anglo-Catholic movement of to-day. Newman is presented as a profound speculative thinker, "symbol of that perpetual struggle between the reactionary and developing, between the separate and the universal, found in the Catholicism," but with a mind indifferent to questions of social justice. Professor Neary has been associated with the work of Newman clubs at the universities of Texas, Illinois and Columbia.

"George Lewes and George Eliot," by Anna T. Kishel, is "our first vivid portrait of the two most interesting figures of the 19th century," according to the author. Lewes' later fame was not largely upon his association with George Eliot and to a less extent on his "Life of Goethe." Little has been written about Lewes and little about his wife. Lewes has been no biography, but it is "A Record of Records," since it is based almost entirely on Lewes' unpublished diaries and letters now in the possession of his grand-daughters.

"Mistress of a Spy," by Nicholas Snowdon, is a series of adventures along the eastern front. Wenceslaus is shown as a Hungarian lad, "a little Hungarian youth," he calls himself, just out of high school when the World War broke out. He entered the Austro-Hungarian secret service at once and after a few weeks in a school for special training, was sent to a boy of eighteen, to pit his talents against the Germans. He becomes the spy of the enemy and the double-crossing spy who were working for both sides.

"Biography," by G. N. Behrman, was one of the most successful plays of the 1933 season. The heroine is a charming and easy-going woman who has had many affairs and won fame as a portrait painter. Richard Kurt, young journalist and rebel against society, engages Marion to write her biography for the sensational magazine he represents. Leander Nolan, her first lover, now a rising politician, re-enters life as a man of power, publishing stories about himself which may prove damaging to his career, he intervenes to stop the publication of the biography. The comedy develops from the contact of these three types—the tolerant, understanding woman of the world, the conventional and the idealist.

"Democracy, Debt and Disarmament," by Archibald MacLeish, is a volume by the author of the Pulitzer prize poem, "Conquistador." The author says: "This book is not a collected edition of my poems or does it purport to trace my development as a poet. What I have done here has been to select from poems already published, poems which have not yet published, these pieces I can now re-read without embarrassment."

"Democracy, Debt and Disarmament," by Walton Newbold, is an analysis of the financial and commercial legacy of the modern world. It begins with the Glorious Century and continues to the first stages of present industrial revolution. The present world crisis, Mr. Newbold maintains, points to the breakdown of capitalism. The author is an Englishman, a former Communist member of Parliament and a member of the Macmillan Committee appointed to examine the working of the gold standard.

"American Way," by Boris Lowek, draws President Roosevelt against a Washington background, beginning with the inaugural address and the bank holiday and ending with the NRA in its earlier straits.

"Dent and Production," by Ernest Jones, discusses the operating characteristics of industrial economy.

"With Heart Courageous," by Edna Kenton, is an account of the lives of the French Jesuit missionaries who first came to the new world in 1611, taught the Indians, built missions and churches and created a new country. The book is intended for young readers and is based on the volumes of letters sent back to France by the Jesuits, which were known as relations.

"Strangest Friendship in History," by G. S. Vireck, is a book which is popular in manner. The author explains in great detail his history between Woodrow Wilson and Colonel House, the historical consequences of this friendship and the cause of its rupture.

"Habits: Their Making and Unmaking," by Knights Dunlap, is consistently readable. The author, president of experimental psychology at Johns Hopkins University, presents his findings in regard to the interrelations of the processes of learning and unlearning, or habit making and habit breaking.

The last four chapters deal with the practical application of his theories in breaking bad habits, such as smoking, ties, etc.

"The Matador," by Harry Steiner, is a biography of the Spanish matador, Belmonte, who was born in the slums of Seville and is now a wealthy land and cattle owner in Andalucia. His methods of fighting have made him fight history.

"The Gunner," by Captain Paul A. Curtis, is a book that will be of absorbing interest to every sportsman, hunter and target shot. This volume describes all types of guns and their ammunition. The book opens with a brief but interesting history of the origin of guns and gunpowder; there are chapters on gunpowder, gun gases, smoke, deer-hair, with many incidents of the chase told in an absorbing manner.

Other books added during the last week are: "I Know Just the Thing for That," by J. F. Matheson; "Highway from the Other Side" by John E. Winsor; "Cannibalism: Man in Conflict," by E. M. Deacon; "Wood and Woodless Raw Materials" by J. S. Head, and "Nature of Building Materials" by A. H. Lark.

Fiction books added during the last week are: "Another Man's Wife" by M. B. Lovett; "Portrait Room" by Valentine Williams; "Miss Tailor" by Dorothy L. Sayers; "First Love and Last" by Coss Howard.

Picture books added during the last week are: "A Child's Book of the West" by Warwick Deeping; "Challenge of the North" by W. M. Mowery; "Rhodesian Farm" by Jane England; "Below the Surface" by E. M. ## "Home for Sale" by Jack Lindsay.

"Seven Men Come Back" by Warwick Deeping; "Challenge of the North" by W. M. Mowery; "Rhodesian Farm" by Jane England; "Below the Surface" by E. M. Chafferton; "The Mountain" by Alan Villiers; "Mother" by Mrs. E. W. B. Sart; "Ginger Griffins" by Anne Bridge; "Four Generations" by Naomi Jacobs, and "Crown and Covenant" by Duncan McLean, and "And Quiet Flows the Don" by M. Sholokhov.

"Strangest Friendship in History," by G. S. Vireck, is a book which is popular in manner. The author explains in great detail his history between Woodrow Wilson and Colonel House, the historical consequences of this friendship and the cause of its rupture.

"Habits: Their Making and Unmaking," by Knights Dunlap, is consistently readable.

The last four chapters deal with the practical application of his theories in breaking bad habits, such as smoking, ties, etc.

"The Gunner," by Captain Paul A. Curtis, is a book that will be of absorbing interest to every sportsman, hunter and target shot.

This volume describes all types of guns and their ammunition. The book opens with a brief but interesting history of the origin of guns and gunpowder; there are chapters on gunpowder, gun gases, smoke, deer-hair, with many incidents of the chase told in an absorbing manner.

Other books added during the last week are: "I Know Just the Thing for That," by J. F. Matheson; "Highway from the Other Side" by John E. Winsor; "Cannibalism: Man in Conflict," by E. M. Deacon; "Wood and Woodless Raw Materials" by J. S. Head, and "Nature of Building Materials" by A. H. Lark.

Fiction books added during the last week are: "Another Man's Wife" by M. B. Lovett; "Portrait Room" by Valentine Williams; "Miss Tailor" by Dorothy L. Sayers; "First Love and Last" by Coss Howard.

Picture books added during the last week are: "A Child's Book of the West" by Warwick Deeping; "Challenge of the North" by W. M. Mowery; "Rhodesian Farm" by Jane England; "Below the Surface" by E. M. ## WILLINGDONS ARE HONORED

Freedom of Edinburgh Conferred on Former Governor-General and Wife

Edinburgh, Scotland, July 30.—Lord Willingdon, Viceroy of India and former Governor-General of Canada, paid a remarkable tribute to Lady Willingdon when together they received the freedom of that city. Surely in Scotland is the freedom of a city conferred on both husband and wife.

Lord Willingdon expressed his gratification at "so signal a reward." It was he, said, doubly gratifying to him the same honor was being conferred upon his wife "for merits in which I can claim no part and of which I am, therefore, free to testify that in her case your judgment has been simply justified."

"For not only has the passage of the years increasingly brought home to me how little useful work I could have done without her by my side to help, advise, and encourage, to share with me the joys and sorrows of the success and failure of our efforts of a long and varied public life, but also no one knows better than I the full tale of her labors to mitigate distress and suffering and to bring happiness and comfort into the life of the people of each country to which our duties have called us."

Lady Willingdon was formerly Lady Marie Adelheid, daughter of the first Earl Brownlow. She is fifty-nine, and has been the recipient of many honors, including the coveted Kaiser-i-Hind gold medal.

CONSIDER MOTHER AT MEAL TIME

The family sits down to supper. That is, Mr. Blank sits down and picks up the carving knife. Mrs. Blank sits up on his junior chair and ties a napkin around his neck. Mortene, a bit older, discovers that she has none. Mrs. Blank goes to the sideboard, gets it, pushes Mortene in closer to the table. She surveys it and then goes out for the coffee, bread and ice water. Which she likes hot, fresh and cold respectively.

"Oh, come on, Ag. Can't you ever get settled? I like my meal in peace. You're forever fussing."

"It be there. You three go on," calls Mrs. R.

TABLE DICTATOR

Water and coffee poured, Mrs. Blank says. "Don't give me much meat. I'm not hot to eat."

"There you go. Mortene's a state of mind. It doesn't bother me." He turns the steaming over with the big fork. "It's all tough. And I don't like it so well done."

"I know. But I have to get cheap cuts and cook it to death. You can't get it rare."

"Dad, you didn't give me any gravy."

"It's too rich."

"I can't eat potatoes without gravy."

"You can't have it. Stop making that face. If you cry you'll leave the table."

Homer sits back and drops his chin on his chest.

"Oh, Jim, don't start that all over again. Give him some gravy. I have to make it for him and he's not it. And I do want some peace and quiet."

"I won't give him gravy. Mortene hasn't any."

"She doesn't like it. Do sit up, Homer, and eat your dinner."

NO DESSERT:

But Homer doesn't. He drinks water and eats bread and butter and jelly.

"If you don't eat your tomatoes and your meat you'll get no dessert," his father says.

"There isn't any," announces his wife uncertainly.

"No dessert?" Can Jim believe his eyes?

"I was going to get upset but I hadn't enough change. It was too hot to bake anything."

Mr. B. reaches in his pocket. "Here, Jim, you go down to the drug store and get a quart of 'ice cream.'

"Oh, Jim, that's the laundry money. I know it is. And see her finish first anyway."

MOTHER IGNORED

"Good!" shouts Homer, pushing back his plate. He hasn't touched a thing but bread and butter and his sister hasn't done much better. Their father has eaten a big meal.

One notice that Mrs. Blank has not touched her coffee but only sips it. She does not have ice cream. And the laundry man to put off again. And the meal, as usual, wrong in Jim's eyes. He worries, or at least feels responsible for the children but not for her. Too—she does not know exactly why, but the children are the ones. No one notices mother.

BARONESS LEFT BIG FORTUNE

C.P.R. Magnate's Adopted Daughter Leaves Wealth to Aid Australian Emigration

Canadian Press
London, July 30.—Probate of the will of Alice Stephen Baroness Northcote shows the baroness left the bulk of her fortune of $1,000,000 to the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The baroness, widow of Lord Northcote, one-time governor of Bombay and later Governor-General of Australia, was an adopted daughter of the late Lord Mountbatten, prime minister of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Her will directs formation of the "Northcote Children's Emigration Fund" in memory of her husband to assist poor children, especially orphans, to emigrate from Britain to Australia and to establish and equip themselves there.

The baroness, widow of Lord Northcote, one-time governor of Bombay and later Governor-General of Australia, was an adopted daughter of the late Lord Mountbatten, prime minister of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The whole movement is a collaborative scheme of research," said Miss Thrupp, "being carried out under the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace for the purpose of a better understanding between Canada and the United States."

Other than saying that it was under the general direction of James D. Shottwell, professor of international relations of the Social Science Research Council, with his quarters in New York, Miss Thrupp was reluctant to throw any light on this subject which should be of great interest to Canadians at large.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By MARY E. BAGUE
AS FOR APPETIZING TOMATO DISHES

The best way to eat the rich, deep scarlet-misted home grown tomato is with pepper and salt. But for those who like variety, there are always some ways and means to get it. Try, for instance, scalloped tomatoes and pepper.

For the next you need four ripe tomatoes, 4 sweet green peppers, 1 package Philadelphia cream cheese, 1 cup cracker crumbs, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1/2 teaspoon white pepper, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-3 cup milk.

Saute and peel tomatoes. Cut in slices about 1/4 inch thick. Wash peppers. Remove seeds and white membranes. Cut and dice in crosswise slices about 1/4 inch thick. Put a layer of tomatoes in a buttered baking dish and cover with a layer of pepper slices. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, sugar and crumbled cheese. Cover with cracker crumbs. Repeat layer for layer, until dish is full. Melt butter over the whole. Bake thirty-five minutes in a moderate oven. Serve from baking dish.

Then there are tomatoes and mushroom toast.

Four large tomatoes, 2 sweet green peppers, 4 small onions, 1 pound mushrooms, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, 4 tablespoons milk.

Cover with cracker crumbs. Melt butter over the whole. Bake thirty-five minutes in a moderate oven. Serve from baking dish.

DONNA of the BIG TOP

by EULAH POYNTER

CHAPTER XLV

Donna studied the contents of the clothes closet. What an accumulation of clothing she had—bungalow aprons, gingham dresses, her wedding finery. There was no need to take all that to New York. Her life revolved as the months went by, the village faded as the seasons came and Minnie had no time to make them.

Her trunk, containing her circus wardrobe, was in the attic. It was so heavy she doubted if she could move it alone, yet she had the help would mean saving a train of useless Donna, was in no mood to

She would take the car, she decided, and find someone to drive Bill back from Lebanon. If she faced again she would be sure to give him a ride, and plan a surprise. She wanted to keep what little self-respect she had. There was a train for Chicago at six o'clock. If she hurried she could catch it.

Once out of this house she would be able to put Bill out of her mind again. She would be sure to give him a ride, of course. Desertion was grounds for divorce.

If she remained at the farm until the will was read Bill would have more cause for bitterness against her. Perhaps, however, she could, after all, would contest the will and Con David's scheming would be ruined.

All of the other members of the household were downstairs—Bill sobbing as though he had lost his heart, his wife, his home, his job, his bite, his soul, feeling the loss of his grandfather scarcely at all in the face of this disillusion. No one heard the sound as Donna dragged the big trunk down the stairs from the attic—heard her mean of pain as she stepped down—crashed down on her knees.

The pain abated her so that she was afraid she was going to faint. Obviously she could not move the trunk further, certainly not down another flight of stairs. She had been feeling better, but that was over. She was not like that now. She did not have the strength she once had, when the weight of her own body and Madeline's seemed nothing.

She decided to take only necessities in a travel bag and leave a note asking to have the trunk shipped later. It could be delivered to one of the hotels in Lebanon and she could send instructions later where to have it forwarded. It might be some time before she could get a job. She would have to do a lot of lumbering up to make good in an act again. And bookings might not be easy to secure alone.

Alone—oh, God, how could she go on alone? When she stepped out of this house she would be leaving more than a home. She would be leaving her soul, her heart—all that had made life livable.

She tried to harden herself against Bill. It had been unjust for him to take Con's explanation as final. She had no chance to justify herself. All she could do was to prove that she had counted for nothing against the word of a stranger. Perhaps in time she could learn to hate him. How only the agony of separation mastered her.

She old grandfather, whom she knew that she was not with him into his final resting place? Would he know she had crept out of the house like the thief she was? She had made the old man's last days happy and nothing could destroy that fact. But for her grandfather she had known that the grandchild had failed him.

"Some day," Donna sobbed aloud, "some day. Bill Siddle, you'll understand and be sorry you've treated this way. God, do you come to me for forgiveness, and I won't give it. I can be hard and bitter, too! I'm going to forget you. I'm going to be the greatest serial performer in the world! When my name is plastered on billboards in three sheets and twenty-four sheets and I'm acclaimed in Europe, as well as here, you'll wish you hadn't driven me away!"

Then, because fate meant so little to her, she wanted a career was the last she wanted, a career was the last the floor beside the bed, and, hugging his pillow in her arms, moaned her love for him. Never again would her hands reach out in the night to touch him. Never again would she smooth his dark hair or kiss his cheek and say him, "Whisper, 'What's the matter, honey? Can't you sleep?'"

"On, Bill! Bill! I'd never seen you if I just didn't love me as much! Why didn't you love me before we were married? If I'd told you the truth, but I didn't. Now, I've got to tell you it's in my heart I'm leaving him. It's in my heart I'm leaving Grandfather, smiling, his sightless eyes stretching as though the cold air had stood on that platform.

"I'm dead, your grandfather was dead and Bill worse than dead!"

She fought the impulse to run in the opposite direction, to seize the car and drive back to the farm. Then a shrill whistle split the air and the old man made his decision. She had to run, stumbling blindly, hitting the heavy traveling bag against her legs. As the train drew to a standstill she reached the platform. There was no time to buy a ticket. A porter stopped down, took her luggage and her on the train.

"Pulman?" he asked.

"Yes. To Chicago."

FAMOUS FATHERS' SONS LOCATED

They All Seem to Be Working in High Posts For Government in Washington

Washington, July 30.—Any one who wants to know what becomes of sons of famous men should come here and take a look.

Most of them seem to be working in the government now. Two or three are more than are celebrated that their fathers. A partial list reveals:

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace has the job his father once had in a Republican administration. His secretary is the present Henry Morris.

Waggoner, architect, had passed over the road since she had not traveled it and a dark ribbon was cut through the snow. She made fairly good time. She discovered, when she reached the public square, that she had plenty of time to visit the six stations and drive the car into the garage adjoining the Central Hotel and asked Ben Goddard, the owner, to see that it was returned to the Siddle farm.

Young Franklin K. Lane Jr., whose dad was secretary of the interior, has the job of a new air policy board. Dr. Worth B. Daniels, son of Ambassador to Mexico Josephus, is on the local Board of Public Welfare. The father of Director Joseph H. Choate Jr., of the Federal Emergency Control Administration, was ambassador to Turkey.

Big, youthful Charles Eliot, secretary of the National Planning Board, and Thomas Eliot, a lawyer in one of the emergency agencies, is son of Harry's great former president.

Charles Eliot, an enthusiastic New Dealer who works with the National Emergency Council and helped develop the housing programme, is the son of the inventor.

TO CONSIDER MEMORIAL AVE.

Plans For Permanent Up- keep of Planted Road Will Be Discussed

Plans for the planting of all the trees and the maintenance of the trees in the city to discuss the future of Memorial Avenue will be sponsored in the City Hall during September by a specially organized committee of the districts of the City of Victoria.

The committee consists of Frank M. Furtridge, chairman; Capt. R. F. Mathews and H. G. Holmes. It is hoped by the committee that the public meeting may be able to decide on some definite plan for the future of the avenue's welfare.

The avenue was planted several years ago with a specially chosen assortment of trees in memory of Victoria's fallen war heroes. Lately it has become overgrown and the Canadian Legion has been doing much to keep it up-to-date.

Mr. Furtridge, in announcing plans for the meeting, said: "It is suggested that those likely to attend the meeting and the citizens generally, fully acquaint themselves with the present condition of the avenue so that they might then proceed to fully discuss plans for its permanent upkeep. Opinions have been strongly voiced that the people should definitely decide whether or not Memorial Avenue should be continued or be allowed to stand as it is. It is the state of mind, we hope, that will be the state of mind behind the origin."

The avenue is four miles long, extending from Bay Street to Mount Douglas Park, one mile being within the city limits and three miles in Saanich.

FIFTY-ONE YEARS A NEWSPAPER MAN

Without hesitating on a dozen topics, blunt and confident, without being dogmatic. He does not care whether you agree with him or not. He wants to get your opinion and he takes it for granted that you are interested in him.

Dates has profoundly influenced the political thought of two generations of Canadians. His editorials have had their repercussions in many a campaign. The blunt expression of his clear thinking has been echoed and reprinted in every part of Canada, and when he makes a speech his trenchant sentences linger in the memory. Long before the party leaders of to-day had made their entry into politics, Dates dominated the political thinking of Canadians in the prairie provinces.

Friend and associate of Laurier (and others), Dates wrote his best-known book, "J. W." was a staunch supporter of the old Liberal chieftain until, in 1917, the "win-the-war" movement became the all-important question in politics. Under the weight of his party's support of the support of the old Liberals and helped the Tories to sweep western Canada. When the war was over Dates went back to his Liberal principles and became the oracle of the Farmer-Progressives. That party and much of the country were in the throes of the rise of The Free Press.

For eleven years a newspaperman, Dates has worked for The Free Press for thirty-nine, thirty-three of them as editor-in-chief. He has seen the Winnipeg newspaper grow from small beginnings to the stature of a metropolitan daily.

His present partnership with E. H. Macklin, he established The Free Press as one of the most powerful journals in Canada. It has been the battle of the prairie banner. Essentially a political newspaper, Dates has maintained his position by keeping away from party politics. Many and tempting have been the offers made to him by all the major parties. He has remained to his death, a politician-at-large. Essentially a progressive Liberal, Dates is not biased by party considerations. He will criticize anyone, no matter who supports it, if he thinks it is dangerous or reactionary. He can be radical or conservative, as his convictions lead him. Where he finds blunder he attacks it ruthlessly.

He is well known in the United States, from whence his ancestors, of Scandinavian blood, migrated to Onto several generations ago. He is on both sides of the line of his writings or his lectures. At present he has a lectureship in Columbia University, New York, from which he is interpreting in the greatest possible writing world. His lucid analysis of British Imperial relations, delivered in 1926 at a university round-table in Chicago, stands as one of the most complete that has been delivered.

Some years ago, when naval discussions were on the topic, a group of navalists' attitude to navy building. He answered them in a sentence: "If Canada had the money to build a navy, we'd spend the money on something else."

The writer introduced him in Washington to Senator Bush. "You & I are alike," he said. The two men, extraordinarily alike in physical and mental make-up, sat in a corridor of the Senate for hours and then arranged another meeting. Sarah is one of the few politicians for whom Dates has a genuine admiration.

Dates has been in Canada for over sixty-eight years ago. He studied in Argenteuil High School until he was seventeen, then went to work on The Montreal Star. He worked on various newspapers between Montreal, Ottawa and Victoria. In 1901, when he was placed in charge of the editorial destinies of The Free Press, he has controlled and moulded them ever since.

He has raised a large family of his own, and has started on the road to success, in diverse interests, many of other's younger. He is more loved than feared by his subordinates. In his anger he is formidable, but he will always listen to an explanation. He is a man of great tact. For John Dates, he pointed out, could not empty the salves and now the laws, and that is his way of keeping fit.

Moonlight Nudists Swim at Elk Lake

One of several persistent reports of the establishment of nudist colonies on Vancouver Island was trashed down last week to a half truth.

A harvest moon and water warmed by a day of bright sunshine to an ideal temperature for swimming were the reasons.

The explanation was received from a lady at a party of four.

"We do not belong to a nudist colony. We are not interested in them and we have not the slightest idea of forming one," she said. "We are going to have a party at Elk Lake. We have been having sun and fruit picking during the day. We came home to play bridge in the evening. At midnight the moon was bright and the water looked inviting. So we decided to swim, nude in the nude. We put on wraps, walked to the water, plumped in, and a swim and were out a few minutes.

We came home to play bridge again and hurried home. We thought we were unobserved. Apparently we were wrong. Please understand we are not forming a nudist colony and are not interested in them."

Jarie Dressler Funeral Tuesday

To this poem, her friends said, Miss Dressler often recited some particular significance. She had it engraved on a thin silver plate which she always carried with her in her purse, and which will be laid on the casket when it is placed in a crypt in Forest Lawn.

The poem reads:

"Her face is like a God's come back to life—
A face that shows the pain of life,
And happiness that centuries have known—
A God who speaks as only idols can."

Perhaps she learned the truth when she was young.

And once again with heaven songs and hymns her God and Goddesses came.

We live with us a little while on earth."

MISS MACDONALD TO SING

Miss Jessie Macdonald, soprano, will sing at the Victoria Concerts on "Alice With Me." Miss Macdonald, who has gained note in the music and on the concert stage, is a close friend of the Cobourg, Ont. native.

Miss Catherine Lewis, who used to sing for Miss Dressler on the stage and in the films, is "singing music."

She plays the organ.

The body of Miss Dressler will be buried in a plain casket in Victoria, after a few days of lying in state in the church where she died.

Officials of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced the studio would close completely during the services and the flags would be at half staff.

NOTHUGHT TO LIVE

Death conquered an indomitable will in claiming the life of the sixty-five-year-old actress, much beloved here, of the screen, who really lived for her art, the reality of her art, the making of motion pictures, creating another masterpiece three years, smiling, defeating, triumphing and grumpy old ways would have again been overcome throughout the world.

She knew ending her life. She was ill with cancer for three years. She died when her days were almost over, but she continued her work, even to the point when her appearance before the cameras had to be curtailed to short durations because of the pain she suffered.

Miss Dressler carried on and her will to live remained with her almost to the end of her death. Almost at the last age her physician abandoned all hope, saying death might come in a few hours, a few days, and surely within a few weeks.

JARIE IN COMA

She was in a coma for more than two weeks, unable to recognize those about her. Shortly before she died consciousness she seemed to know the end was near.

"I did put up a good fight, didn't I?"

These were the last words she spoke. Her physician marvelled at her resistance.

Uremia was the immediate cause of death. It is one of the complications of the enormous growth in the lower abdomen.

For more gifted than most of her contemporaries, Miss Dressler was known as one of the most brilliant conversationalists in Hollywood.

Her success on the screen is unrivaled.

Marie Dressler was Hollywood's "old trouper," although the stage might also claim her for its own. The actress, a native of Canada, had been everything in the show world, from chorus girl to screen star. Although success came to her late in life, she had years of toil before that. Miss Dressler made no complaint of the long period of unemployment prior to the time she became a film actress when she portrayed the role of Marty in "Anna Christie."

"Marty age is the best part of life," she said sometime after celebrating her sixty-second birthday. "You don't really begin to live or to appreciate life until after you're fifty."

"One of the most tragic and pitiful sights in the world is a middle-aged woman who is still in love for her looks and looks and acts accordingly. They are such fools. As soon as their families are reared and their hair is turning gray, they fold their hands and give up the game."

"Why, if they only knew it, life is a continual adventure. They can start living for themselves instead of thinking about other people. Their responsibilities are over. I didn't really begin to live until I was fifty, and I honestly feel younger than I did at twenty-five."

BORN IN ONTARIO

Miss Dressler was born in Cobourg, Ontario, November 9, 1871. Her father was Alexander Kloss, an attorney in the Criminal War. Her mother, Anna, was a German. Kloss, was a musician.

The actress' first public appearance was as cupid on pedestal at the age of five in a church theatrical performance.

When she was fourteen years of age, she appeared in a theatrical production in the town of Lindsay, Ontario, and was laughed at. The laughs angered her and she joined a loving light歌舞 group. Her first job paid 25 weekly.

Named "Lillian" when she adopted the name of an aunt, Marie Dressler spent the year on the stage.

WITH LILLIAN HERSELF

Success followed the footsteps of the accomplished young actress. With George Baker Opera Company, she played the queen in "The Bohemian Girl," the foolish wife in "Fra Diavolo," and Barbara in "Black Robinson Crusoe." She supported Lillian Russell in "Lady Macbeth."

Miss Dressler made an outstanding hit as Flo Honeycut in "Lady Slavey," a part she played for four years. In one of the Joe Weber shows, she played in "Hippety, Poppy." She did a Romeo and Juliet version of "The Merchant of Venice" and played in an all-star version of "The Rivals."

It was during these successful days that she bridged the formerly unbreakable chasm between the social "Your hundred" and the theatrical world. She became acquainted with

DEATH ROBS SCREEN OF BELOVED FIGURE

Many and varied were the roles of Marie Dressler, a famous stage-film star, who died in Cobourg, her home town, on July 26, 1934. She was 63 years old. Above left, the actress in a portrait; above right, in a scene from "Anna Christie"; upper centre, at the reception of the Motion Picture Academy's award of merit for the best actress of 1931; upper right, appearing in "Tillie's Nightmare" in 1930; below left, in a 1932 role and right in "Min and Bill," which won her the 1933 film honors.

Miss Dressler, Pick, recognized leader of New York society, while appearing as an entertainer at her home, and the acquaintance developed into a lasting friendship. Miss Dressler was said to be the first actress to be recognized socially.

Not only social leaders were among her friends. She was a friend of the famous men of the day. She was in politics, finance and the arts over the world. She knew all of the Presidents of the United States since Cleveland.

Miss Dressler, however, never forgot the friends of her early days—the old trouper with whom she wandered from one cheap boarding house to another. The actress carried on a large amount of philanthropic work, the greater part of which was unknown to the public.

FIRST MOVE

She made her first motion picture definitely won't disappoint everybody for a full fledged star."

NOTHING FREE

Young people who came to Marie Dressler for advice were told they might expect nothing in the world to be free.

"I sincerely believe in destiny of man," she said. "But I also know beyond doubt that there must be hard work behind the destiny. As far as college education is concerned, it is worth something only if the boy or girl wants it for some definite purpose. Living life is just as great, even greater, than going to college or university in the world. I am really proud I never had an opportunity to go to school, because I learned by living, not from books. Of course, I realize that old fables like me can give advice unless we are in a position to practice it. I will listen politely and then go out and do what you dare please. If you did take advice you would lose half the fun of living."

Off the screen Miss Dressler was quite different from the roisterous picture characters she has been known to play. She was dignified, a modern matron in sixty-two years of an intensely interesting life. Through countless human experiences she never lost her desire and eagerness for living. Movement, life, activity were the very soul of her existence. She thoroughly enjoyed the character parts in her pictures.

"I have two distinct advantages over the young and beautiful stars in pictures," she said only recently. "I don't have to worry about my figure and I don't have to worry about looking beautiful. I can put on my clothes in two minutes and I can eat anything I please."

VICTORIA POLO TEAM BEATEN

A smart-riding and smooth-working polo team from Maple Bay administered a sound beating to the Centaurs, local polo players, at the grounds off Forest Glen on Saturday. The team in favor of the up-and-coming in the first of this year's home-and-home series won 10 to 2.

Led by their captain, A. Mathewson, the Maple Bay team gave the 200 or so spectators who lined both sides of the field a fine exhibition of polo.

STAGE REVUE IS FEATURED

Empire Theatre Presenting

Fine Acts in Casanova Revue Opening To-day

Warner Baxter To Star Here

"Such Women Are Dangerous."

The Fox film release starring Warner Baxter, will open at the Dominion Theatre to-day. The film, a comedy-drama, stars Baxter in a delightful role as a bachelor-novelist. He has three charming leading ladies —Rosemary Ames, Rochelle Hudson and Mona Barrie.

Nine million women read this young novelist's books and admire him from afar. Three women who are directly interested with him will try to re-enact the love stories he writes. His secretary, secretly in love with him, tries to protect him from the love of two other women, one a young girl who has come to seek his advice in regard to her writing ability, and the other an opera singer who is already married.

Capitol Theatre

Seldom has there been so large and impressive a cast of players in this season's production as that in "Casanova," which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre, with Richard Barthelmess in the leading male role. He has the role of Joe Thunder-Horse, a young and educated Indian brave of the Sioux tribe.

Columbia — In the cast are: Harry Zier, Robert McWade, Charles Maigne, Charles Middleton, Tully Marshall, Douglas Dumbrille, Wallis Clark, William V. Mong, DeWitt Jennings, James Eagle, William Davidson, Frank McGlynn, Henry Kolker and Agnes Harker.

The second feature is "The Merry Prinker," a comedy starring Hugh Herbert and Guy Kibbee.

"Love Birds" is the funniest picture in which Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts have ever appeared together. It opened an engagement at the Columbia Theatre to-day. The tricky story is so filled with hilarious situations, and witty dialogue, and the stars enter into the spirit of the thing with such a will that the result is nothing less than a sure cure for the blues.

Imagine these two worthies, who being the eight of each other, discovering that they have both bought the same ranch in California! And imagine their consternation when they discover that they are stranded on the property in the centre of a great sandy desert, miles off the nearest town, with another water-mill another dwelling in sight! How a blow to Summerville's jaw brings about a gold rush of wild-eyed prospectors to the very ranch in which both have sunk their savings to only one of the uproariously funny incidents in the story.

Being shown on a second feature in Columbia — in over three thousand showings.

"Upper World" at The Playhouse

The story of a double murder in a millionaire's love nest is the theme of the Warner Bros. picture, "Upper World," which opens at the Playhouse Theatre to-day.

The picture is based on the thrilling novel by Ben Hecht, famous author and playwright, who points out that the plot concerns love affairs and bloodshed as can happen in the highest society as well as in the realms of gangland.

Warren William, portraying a millionaire railway magnate, who becomes involved with a chorus girl when neglected by his society and billionaire headed by the cast of talented players. Statley Ayer has the role of his wife, while Ginger Rogers is the burlesque queen for whom he sets up an apartment in which the killings take place.

The supporting cast includes Andy Devine, little Dickie Moore, Henry O'Neill, J. Carroll Naish, Theodore Bikel,

Coulter Stars As Royals Win Match

Didier Pitre Passes Away

Death: Mr. Morris, Mich., July 26.—Didier Pitre, noted figure in the hockey world, died at a home age, died here yesterday following an attack of acute indigestion. He was fifty years of age and had been a member of several professional hockey teams.

BUFFALO WINS ROWING HONORS

Capture Aggregate Title at Canadian Henley; Leanders Take Senior Eights

St. Catharines, Ont., July 26.—Buffalo's husky band of rowers, competing under the West-side banner, to-day ruled the Royal Canadian Henley regatta. Westside led the other crews with forty-three points, garnered on the basis of three for a win, two for second and one for third.

To Canada, however, went the single crown and the Marion Memorial Trophy for victory in the senior eights event for the North American championship.

Yesterday on the completion of three days of great racing, the senior eights race, the big event of the final day, Hamilton Leanders, prospective representatives of the Dominion at the 1936 Olympiad, worked their way through the waves to victory. The Leanders, a Marion Island of Buffalo, a full length separated Buffalo from the Wyandottes at the finish of the grueling.

Westside had to fight off the determined bids of Toronto Argos, but won firm grip on top place by winning one, two and three second places in the twelve events.

Injured Centre-forward Nets Tying Goal as New Westminster Whips Prince Albert 2 to 1 in First Game of Western Football Final

Prince Albert, Sask., July 26.—New Westminster Royals were advanced further along the Dominion Football Association playoff trail yesterday. They defeated Prince Albert City Reds 2 to 1 here yesterday in the first game of a best two-out-of-three series for the western Canada soccer championship and the right to meet eastern winners in the final.

Jack Coulter, Royals' centre forward, was the hero of the game. Suffering a torn ligament in his shoulder shortly after the kick-off, the tricky centre stayed on the field and booted in the tying goal early in the second half. The Reds scored from a corner kick after a fifteen-minute delay in the first half. Bernie laid down a perfect cross that Jim Proudfit headed home.

The visitors forced the play in the first half, but the sharp-shooting forwards were harried of the ball by the hefty kicking of local fullbacks, G. Roy and G. Gandy.

Half-back line matched up Royal's combination plays, giving them little chance to test Millie in goal.

COULTER SCORES

Play swung fairly evenly from end to end in the second half, until Coulter scored from close in to tie the score.

Spencer replaced Coulter at centre, the latter staying on the left wing owing to his injury. A corner was forced. Gandy made a poor effort, the ball skidding along the ground.

Gammel passed it on with a back kick and Spencer nailed it amidst a jam of players to boot in a low one that did not give Millie an opportunity to save.

THE TEAM FOOL:

Reds—Millie, goal; Brady, Gilligan, backs; G. Roy, Proudfit, David, half-backs; McMillan, J. Boyd, McInerney, Byars and Barrie.

Royals—Sandford, goal; Anderson, McRobbin, Doherty, Doherty, Shanahan, half-backs; G. Roy, Gandy, Coulter, Spencer and Govey.

LITTLE BITSY GOES LONG WAY

THE BIG SIX

Joe Moore of the Giants came out ahead of his three rivals yesterday in the scramble for last place in the big six. He won his race to aid his quest to the aces, while Ethan Allen and John Moore of the Phillips, and Sam Leslie of Brooklyn, who had tied with him, all lost ground.

Lou Gehrig also won a big six place, replacing Joe Vassallo who was held to a tie in ten times up.

Gehrig also failed to hit, so he moved above Vassallo by holding his loss to three points. The National Leaguers gained on their American League rivals when Paul Waner and Bill Terry gained a point apiece and Gehrig, Gehrig, lost five.

In Marriage or Lottery?

Dorothy Dix

Buy No.
Jewelry and Brains
Count

CAN A MAN tell before marriage what sort of wife he is getting, or is marriage always a trying-a-pig-in-a-poke business?

A bachelor friend of mine insists that marriage is the greatest gamble in life, and that we must not take a chance to the big lottery Lady Luck simply likes them good-by. Says he:

"Let young men bet with strangers at horse races; let them play poker with card sharpers on ocean liners; let them buy sweepstakes tickets, and they are playing virtually a sure thing compared with the risks that they are taking in marriage. Marriage is a woman's game and men had better leave it alone."

"Look at the nefarious way in which women drive men to their whims and fancies, and dispense and over their looks to get some one to support them for life? All men have in their minds a picture of the kind of girl they would like to marry. The girl finds out what their ideals are and then she begins with diabolical cunning to undermine the part."

"Say the man likes 'em slender, and she starves herself down to a living skeleton. He likes sweet, amiable women, and butter wouldn't melt in her mouth. Or maybe he has a fancy for highbrows, and she bone up on book reviews and discourses on current literature. And so the poor simp is taken in, and there is romance and wedding bells and he thinks he is going to live happily ever after."

"But two years later what a change! The girl has now reverted to her natural character, which is not the one that she 'sold' herself on. The trusting male who admired a thin girlish figure now finds that he is united to a tub of fat. The man who adored the cool, drowsing type discovers that he has tied himself to a hen who pecks the life out of him. And the man who married for an intellectual companion is forced to death by a wife who never reads anything but the society news."

"Tell you that in any other business except marriage the law would protect the person so swindled. It would be called misrepresentation and getting goods under false pretenses and the deal would be called off."

All of these charges are admitted as a general proposition, though not true in every case. Many a man dreams a golden-haired blonde who turns into a brontosaurus when the dye has worn off, and many a soft fluffy little kitten keeps her claws sheathed until after she has got her man. But before the law does something awful with burning oil in its eyes a woman who has merely used the arts with which Nature endowed her in order to secure a mate, does it not expect the man to use some ordinary intelligence and prudence in investigating the kind of proposition that has been put up to him before he lets his pile on a wedding ring?

Take looks, for instance. No man is such a dullard as not to know that if he marries a girl for her beauty alone he is bound to lose out in the long run. In spite of diets and countings calories the willowy figure may turn plump, and the plump one becomes a string bean. Time inevitably takes away that schoolgirl complexion and other lines in the fairest face. The man who marries a girl at twenty solely for her looks knows what he will have when she is fifty, and he is a poor sport when he cries out that he has been stung.

As for the balances, any man who has gamblers enough to carry on any ordinary business, will have foresight enough to guess what they are going to be wearing next spring in hats and gowns, or which way the market is going to jump, can make a mighty shrewd estimate of the cost of wife that any girl will make. For by the time a girl is old enough to marry her character and dispositions are set, and while they may develop and get more so, they will never change.

What she is, is there for any man to see who will take the trouble to give her the appraising once-over. Nor has any girl the ability to conceal her faults and blemishes from even a male moron. They stick out like a sore thumb.

Every high-tempered girl has the fact written in every line of her face. Storm signals are in her eyes. Warning in the fretful lines about her mouth. She is brimming over to burst. And no man can know her long without seeing the thin crust of her self-centered break and her permanent devil dog teeth.

The nagger and the petty tyrant are born, not evolved, by marriage, and any man must be stupid indeed who does not realize that if he marries a girl who can never let bygones be bygones and who will never play anybody else's game, he will spend the balance of his days in saying "yes ma'am" and listening for the millionth time to a recitation of his shortcomings.

The selfish girl who takes the best of everything for herself. The extravagant girl who dresses beyond her means. The lazy girl who will not work. The sloven who is never tidy or neat. The cold-hearted girl who loves no one but herself. The pleasure-mad girl who can never get enough of wild parties. Do not all of these tip a man off to the kind of wives they will make?

The trouble with men is that they do not make any intelligent effort to find out anything about a girl's character and disposition before marriage. If they put in half as much time looking over the women they marry as they do in looking over a new car they are buying, there wouldn't be so many disgruntled husbands in the world. For marriage isn't a gamble. You win or lose out according to the judgment you have displayed in picking out your mate.

Inbound from ports in the Philippine Islands, China and Japan, the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Russia reached the British ports at 6:45 o'clock and proceeded to Vancouver two hours later. She brought to 321 passengers, 2,000 tons of general freight and a large consignment of mail.
